NOTES

What makes a person worthy to be honored? We tend to admire, honor, and associate with people we perceive to be great, powerful, and famous regardless of their character, but Proverbs 31:10-31 reminds us of eight biblical qualities that we should celebrate and praise, look for in a person, and cultivate in ourselves.

8 Qualities that Make a Person Worthy to be Honored

- Trustworthy
- Sacrificial
- Industrious and hard-working
- Caring

- Protective of family
- Upright and honorable
- Speaks wisdom and truth
- God-fearing and prayerful

REFLECT and DISCUSS

1. Take a few minutes to talk about the message. Note the context of the passage and think about how you might be able to apply this to your specific life stage, family background, or experiences.
2. Think about the people you admire and honor. What qualities do you think make them worthy?
3. Do you think you are worthy to be honored? What makes you think so?
4. Does your list of praiseworthy qualities align with the qualities of the virtuous woman described in the passage? What do you think might be the impact of cultivating these 8 qualities on your relationships?
5. What practical steps can you take to develop those qualities in yourself?
